This cooperation in specific areas may be designed by mutual consent and incorporated into specific additional agreements upon signature by the appropriate authorities of both the institutions.

Early intervention of bystanders (the first links of the chain of survival) have been shown to improve survival and good neurological outcomes of patients in an emergency. Involvement of communities in early basic life support (BLS) and cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR), especially of lay people is of prime importance as with no duty to respond. A better knowledge of the most effective initiatives might help improve survival and health system organization. Simplicity and brevity of the community training programs are important to allow for maximal efficiency and the training of individuals who do not wish to participate in a longer course or seek BLS certification . For the purpose of this review, we defined "community" as the general population of a defined geographical area (i.e., a group of neighborhoods, one or more cities/towns or regions, a part of or a whole country), in which individuals with no duty or organized role to respond can act as potential witnesses or bystanders of a Cardiac arrest victim. This definition does not include healthcare professionals or first responders with a role as rescuer or part of a response system. We defined "initiative" as any intervention promoting BLS or providing
